The Right Scent

Consider the scenario when a ewe dies while giving birth to a lamb. The newly-born lamb desperately needs a mother's care, but that is not possible. Why not give the lamb to a ewe that may have lost its lamb about the same time? Among sheep professionals, it's commonly known that you can't bond an orphaned lamb with just any ewe. Every lamb has its own unique smell, its own scent. A ewe recognizes her own lamb by its scent – if it doesn't smell right, she will reject it. So, what can be done with a hungry orphaned lamb?

This is what shepherds have done through the years. They take the skin of the dead lamb, and wrap it around the motherless lamb like a sweater. Then the "clothed" lamb is presented to the mother of the dead lamb. The ewe smells it, recognizes the scent, and accepts the lamb as her own, nourishing it and giving it food to live.

You and I don't have the right "scent" to be accepted by our Holy God, due to our sin. His eyes are too pure even to look on evil (Habbakkuk 1:13; Isaiah 59:1-2). Our sin separates us from God and we are as needy orphans destined to die. But God loves us so much that He provided a remedy to our situation: He gave His Son – the Lamb of God – to die for us. This sinless Lamb whose heart and life are a sweet savor to God took our sins upon himself, paying the price for them.

We can be accepted by God through Jesus (John 14:6; II Corinthians 5:21), when we take on Jesus through baptism. This 'clothes' us with Christ, as we 'put on Christ' in our burial in water (Galatians 3:26-27). Then we have the right scent. Have you been clothed with Christ yet? (-David Sargent, Mobile, AL-)
